According to recent research, Ethical Leadership is “leadership demonstrating and promoting normatively appropriate conduct through personal actions and interpersonal relationships.” This definition embodies the ethical codes of social workers, counselors, nurses and case managers. In this dynamic training we will explore the traits and best practices of ethical leaders, servant leaders and practical ways to implement these in your daily jobs and lives. We’ll begin our training with discussions of ethical standards around leadership and examining ethical principles from our various codes that correspond with strong ethical leadership. From here, we will explore the qualities of servant leadership which can serve as a firm foundation of ethical leadership and best practices to implement ethical leadership principles. Finally, we will adjourn our day with discussions around new ethical perspectives we may have gained from our training. As we strive for excellence in our professions, this training will allow you to explore best practices in ethical leadership with the goal of ultimately improving outcomes for our clients.

BY ATTENDING OUR WORKSHOP, YOU WILL BE ABLE TO:

- Name five ethical standards (from social work, counseling, case management and nursing) and state how they overlap the principles of ethical leadership in the different disciplines
- Discover three ethical principles and traits that can assist as you may move into a leadership role
- Identify three standards from servant leadership as they apply to ethical leadership
- Examine the five qualities necessary and ethical perspectives to cultivate leadership skills
- Summarize their role in becoming or remaining active leaders who serve their profession, the public and allied professionals.
